Description:

From the Author We wrote Scrolls of Zndaria: The Golden Wizard because we wanted children to know that anything is possible. Nate wants to be a wizard in a world where only nobility are selected to study magic. He is a peasant. He is bullied and ridiculed by many of the children of the town's nobility. Even his parents tell him it is a foolish dream. He must overcome this intolerance in order to accomplish his dream.

Scrolls of Zndaria: The Golden Wizard is the first in a seven-book series. The next four books each introduce a new hero that will join Nate. Each book presents a different set of challenges that, just like in real life, each hero must conquer in order to complete their personal quests. The final two books require these five unlikely young heroes to overcome prejudices in order to work together as a team if they are to save the world of Zndaria.

About the Author Jerry D. Jaeger and Stephanie R. Jaeger have been married for seventeen years. Throughout their lives, they have proven that with hard work and persistence, any dream is possible. Jerry struggled with stuttering and was bullied in school. He earned his black belt in Kempo Karate when he was eighteen years old. He graduated with a history degree from Brigham Young University and a law degree from the University of Wyoming. Fulfilling one of his biggest dreams, he served as a special agent for the FBI. Jerry currently works as a prosecutor for Washington County, Utah. Stephanie's parents taught her the value of hard work and encouraged her to pursue her education. Taking this advice to heart, she earned her undergraduate accounting degree from the University of Wyoming and master's degree from Southern Utah University while raising her family. Successfully balancing family and work, she ran her own accounting practice for several years. One of Stephanie's proudest achievements is recently finishing a marathon with Jerry.
